

Bridal Hair, Kenra Style

By Charu Suri

Brides will love the sateen finish provided by Kenra's Silkening Mist ($15.00), which is a luxurious finish to any coiffure, be it a chic chignon or 'let your hair down' look. Used to finish Felicity Huffman's Oscar "do," it comes in a superlightweight aerosol form. When I used the mist, I was amazed at its lighter-than-air feel, and the glossy shine that my hair had. A new addition to Kenra's Platinum Collection, it curbs frizz and repairs split ends, and has a very pleasing smell (a waft of pomegranate).

Another product brides may want to consider is the Volume Spray, which has a hold index of 25, and has all-day staying power. My hairdo was held firmly in place throughout the day, and not a strand came loose. Plus true to its name, it added build to the hair without being too sticky or goopy. Over a million cans are sold each year.

One of my favorite products in the Kenra Platinum line is the Texturizing Taffy, which holds and texturizes hair while giving a nice matte finish. The Grooming Pommade also can hold up a hairdo with ease, and has a water-based formula that rinses out easily.

The new Root Lifting Spray is innovative in its conduit, being both a combination of a mousse and spritz, thereby preventing potential messiness. The product contains silk amino acids, which bolster the hair and strengthen it. The spray is easy to use and lifts the hair right at the roots, where you need it the most. The result? Bride-worthy hair.
