

MICHELLE WILLIAMS' cut is surprisingly versatile — it can be worn slicked back, curled and dressed up with a pretty headband.

"Bangs draw instant attention to eyes, so play up eyes with makeup like LEA MICHELE does," says Boudet.

A CROP IS FASHION-FORWARD

Who it flatters: Women with straight hair and petite features.

What to tell your stylist: The key to looking feminine in a boy cut is keeping layers long enough to tuck them behind the ears. "Don't go shorter than 2½ inches at the bangs, sides and nape of the neck," advises Boudet.

BLUNT BANGS HAVE ATTITUDE

Who it flatters: "Anybody can do a long, layered haircut, but blunt bangs are harder with curly hair," says Boudet.

What to tell your stylist: The layers of this long cut start at the shoulders, about 3 inches above the ends. The bangs
